

Tykeson Teaching Awards
Call for Nominations

Dear CAS Heads,

The College of Arts and Sciences is pleased once again to open the call for nominations for the Tykeson Teaching Awards, which annually recognize one exceptional faculty member from each of the three CAS divisions. This year the award will be presented to teachers who have demonstrated excellence in teaching large lecture classes (classes over 100 students, does not include courses that are primarily delivered through online approaches):

In considering nominees you might focus, for example, on ways that:

- Faculty have reimagined the way required courses or service courses are presented (new technologies, new course materials, experiential learning, online components)
- Faculty have challenged students' preconceptions around issues of diversity and inclusion
- Faculty have created new courses that add to the success of the curriculum in your department or program

These are just suggestions, and we invite you to think about all types of teaching excellence.

You may nominate no more than one faculty member from your department for a Tykeson Teaching Award, unless your department has more than 20 faculty members, in which case you may nominate up to two individuals. If a prior nomination meets the A&17-18 criteria outlined above, you are welcome to resubmit it; please revise it to address this year's call if necessary.

Please just send the individual's name and a 1-paragraph nomination to adsocialsci@uoregon.edu by Friday, February 16th at 5pm. We will follow up with you if any further information is required.

Best,
Phil
